

GOLD DEPOSITS IN SIBERIA

Land Known to Be Enormously Rich Awaiting Development Under a Stable Government.

Some time in the future, when the life of Siberia follows an orderly course under a stable government, there will doubtless be a development of the gold resources of the Okhotsk district, where, so it has been said, the "rivers have golden bottoms." Gold is being mined in the Okhotsk district, but only in a primitive fashion. Last winter a "golovnik" of gold or in English, 137,147 ounce troy, was worth 20 rubles, but it has now risen in value to the present currency of Russia to about 160. Even in a primitive way many of the gold deposits are being worked, and the method by which some of the gold is extracted in Japan is equally primitive. A Japanese vessel with a fishing crew came from Japan loaded with articles for trade, and these are exchanged for furs and gold. The fishing vessel returns to Japan carrying the gold and furs it has received for its merchandise. With mining, the Japanese systematically exploit the region that covers hundreds of square miles, but such operations are of course, one of the questions until a stable government is established.

WAGING WAR ON ELEPHANTS

South African Farmers Have Condemned Them for Their Destruction of Irrigation Canals.

One of the many after-war shortages that the world will have to suffer, but which will not prove the hardship that other lacks have impressed upon the people, is that of African elephants. It is all because the "mighty pachyderms," as the circus bills say, have appropriated the irrigation canals in southern Africa for their own particular bath tubs, and when they plunge into the cooling water to enjoy themselves, they are not particular about the manner in which they tread about the dams and banks. As a result much damage has been done and the agriculturists have been waging a relentless war on the voracious and destructive animals. Many housewives who have made members of the family of the "splashing" variety can appreciate the feelings of a South African farmer when he views the clutter left by the elephants. Recent reports say that no more elephants remain in Zimbari and that southern Rhodesia's herds have been wiped out and that they are left in the eastern Transvaal. The African elephants, unlike those from India, are far from docile and are not easily domesticated.

Don't Blame Environment.

Laying the blame on environment offers an excuse but not a reason for failure. Environment may handicap your start and hinder your progress, but it's not the final arbiter of your destiny. Some of life's greatest failures have been the fortune-coddled youths who have been pampered by having everything they wanted. In striking contrast many of history's conspicuous favorites have risen from obscurity and poverty. After all it's not what a man starts with, but what prompts him to start and keeps him going that counts. When the mental attitude is right no power on earth can curb it. Circumstances may hinder the body from achieving its goal, but the spirit is still triumphant even in bonds. What binds material ruled things only offers challenge to spirit ruled lives. As long as "truth crushed to earth shall rise again" furnishes incentive to conviction urged souls, men headed right will triumph.—Exchange.

Doughboy Diplomacy.

Although the Americans were supposed to be taking no sides in the dispute, the Croats and Serbians of Fiume chose to make the arrival of a battalion of Yankee infantry there the occasion of a grand celebration. Evidently in answer to this demonstration, Italian propagandists liberally plastered the city during the night with banners bearing the words: "O Italia o morte." "Either Italy or death." Everywhere the Americans went for the next few days they were confronted with the slogan.

Then one night some doughboy got busy with a paint brush. The next morning the Italian officers were deeply chagrined to find that nearly all the banners in the central section had been improved during the night and now read:

"O Italia o morte o Hell."—Home Sector.

Three skeletons, nearly complete, evidently Anglo-Saxon chieftains, two with swords by their sides, have been dug up at Mitcham, Surrey, England, in a field known as "Dead Man's Close," belonging to Ravensbury manor. Seven graves have been found since the lord of the manor started digging for gravel just before Christmas, and the site is believed to be an Anglo-Saxon cemetery. A bronze buckle, an earthenware pot, and other remains have been discovered. Some of the bones have been sent to the Cambridge Anthropological museum and some of the relics to the London museum.

Grass.

"What is the ballerina kicking about?" "Says the dancing art has gone to grass." "Oh, well, this Hawaiian craze will be its day."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Snake Charmer's Fake.

Ignorant people in India, are easily duped by the tricks of snake charmers, says the Detroit News. One of the fakes practiced is the putting of a harmless snake in a stupefied condition in a house. The people in the house are told of the presence of a snake by the snake charmer's companion, thus causing alarm. The charmer, who asks money to remove the reptile, then goes to the house, whereupon the snake begins to crawl into the middle of the room, and the charmer catches it. In catching the reptile the charmer says he was bitten, and falls senseless. His companion comes forward and puts a snake stone on an incision previously made for the purpose on the man's hand. The snake charmer recovers, gets up to the astonishment of his audience, and receives a big present, finally departing with the snake and the profit he has made.

Cleanly Wild Animals.

Animals, says a French savant, furnish an example in the matter of hygiene. They were the first creatures who made use of the sponge, soap and even of the toothbrush. From time immemorial they cleaned themselves by using the tongue as a brush, their saliva as soap, their tail as a towel, their claws as a comb. Furthermore, they bathe themselves frequently.

Colonies of monkeys isolate those among them who refuse to observe the rules of cleanliness. It has been remarked that monkeys with well-cared for hands take the precaution when drinking of never letting them get wet. Chimpanzees almost invariably wipe out their mouths after eating and a certain young orang-outang always used a toothpick.

American Royalists.

John Adams estimated that one-third of all the people of the colonies were royalists, that is, opposed to the war with Great Britain. A minority of these favored obedience to British laws, but the great majority opposed the British methods with the colonies, but wanted a peaceful settlement and the maintenance of the British connection. The war drove the royalists, or so-called Tories, into a state of resistance and in the colony of New York alone more than 20,000 took up arms for the British. Out of a total population of less than 400,000, more than 60,000 royalists left the colonies during the revolution because of their political position.

Ancient Uses of Rings.

One of the earliest uses to which rings were put was to make an impression of an engraved design or device upon letters or documents. Whenever an ancient monarch wished to give validity to a certain royal decree, he would take off his huge seal ring and make an impression with it upon the document. A curious superstition use to which signet rings were put is told in Plutarch's Lives. A number of signet rings were thrown into a heap, and one was pulled out at random, the design which the signet bore being interpreted as a favorable or unfavorable omen.

First Reformatory.

For a long time the underlying purpose of penal institutions was vindictive punishment. The idea of reforming criminals was of late origin and of slow growth, beginning with the treatment of juvenile offenders and extending later to the treatment of hardened criminals. The first state juvenile reformatory was established in New York in 1825, and this was followed by others a year or two later in Boston and Philadelphia. Many of the states now have reform schools for juvenile criminals and use reformatory methods in the treatment of old offenders.

Chinese New Year.

For several weeks before the New Year, Chinese business men do everything in their power to get money to pay off all their debts, for a Chinese cannot pass over the year until all his obligations are paid or provided for. The New Year celebration usually ends with the Feast of Lanterns on the fifteenth day of the first moon. Lanterns of all sizes and descriptions are displayed, some representing animals, some flowers, some fruit, some in the shape of dragons. The lanterns are made of silk, cotton or gauze, painted in beautiful colors.

Walking along the sands of Weymouth this autumn (writes a correspondent), I saw a corked bottle which had been washed up by the tide. There was a piece of paper inside, so I took the cork and tried to extract it, but at first, getting impatient at the delay, I broke the bottle, and the message was revealed: "I am a cork and this bottle will find its way back to me."—London Post.

OUR POCKETBOOK.

In spite of the assertion that we were assured that the world's heart would break were not the Peace Treaty accepted as framed, with the implication added that the League of Nations was the uppermost concern in the minds of all the people, there is evidence that there are questions of greater interest to the average man than the league outcome, the Shantung award or the Adriatic settlement, says the Pittsburgh Gazette Times. There is proof that some homely every-day matters occupy far more the thoughts of the common run of mankind than what the Peace Conference did at Paris or what should be done to settle the muddled affairs of Europe. An incident is reported from London showing the direction in which British interest is manifested not in affairs of Europe at large or in furtherance of empire but in the problem of getting clothing at a less price than is commonly asked. And what occupies the English mind as of most pressing importance would probably find a parallel in America.

A member of Parliament contended that men's suits, by applying the process of mass production, could be turned out at half the price ordinarily asked, and he proceeded to demonstrate his theory by opening a shop in London. He took 5,000 orders in two days and the crowds that gathered were so great and the event was regarded so much importance that the newspapers of the British capital devoted columns to the story. At the same time the Adriatic correspondence and the Home Rule bill matters of great moment to statesmen, were almost disregarded in the news.

It may be that questions which statesmen stress and believe the public holds a like view of their importance may not engage the minds of the people. What to the political leader is fraught with much moment may be a far-away subject to the minds of citizens. The London incident but illustrates the stronger appeal made by that which is of direct personal profit than by that which may be prompted by high ideals, yet lacks a personal touch.

NO OTHER CHOICE

Speaking of the late Senator Bankhead as "a sound constructive legislator who will be missed," the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin (Rep.) says "the fact that he once served the Southern Confederacy is rather a historic halo today in the sight of the North as well as of the South." Recalling that many ex-Confederates were sent to Congress after normal conditions were restored, notwithstanding that "a record of Confederate service in any 'anacety' was looked upon as an anathema by Northern politicians," the Evening Bulletin notes that "it was impossible for Southern voters to elect any one of any importance who had not worn the grey uniform or in some way served the Confederacy, since opinion there was almost unanimous." The fact that practically the whole white South was involved explains why, under the reconstruction acts, the Southern State governments passed into and from 8 to 10 years.

remained in the hands of the ex-saves. The vast extent of disfranchisement among the whites, accompanying the grant of universal manhood suffrage to the negroes, was due not only to the exception of fourteen classes of Southern men in President Johnson's amnesty proclamation but to the test oath provided by Congress in 1867, the latter being made even more exhaustive through special enactments of the carpetbag and negro governments. The disfranchised included not only those who had held executive or judicial office or were worth more than $20,000 or had borne arms for the Confederacy but all who had in any way given aid, comfort, counsel or encouragement—or practically every white person of whatever age or sex. As one Union governor of West Virginia put it, "nineteen-twentieths of the white people are disfranchised and can not hold office."

When the majority even at the North began to turn sick at sight of such conditions, the Federal troops were withdrawn, the propped-up negro governments collapsed and the Southern whites were again left free to govern themselves locally. Ex-Confederates had to be sent to Congress as well as to the State legislatures because, as the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin points out, it was otherwise "impossible to elect any one of any importance," or, it may be added, any one really representative or of any ability or fitness.

NO MORE FREE SEEDS

The effort to appropriate $240,000 for the purchase of "free seeds" has failed and so a time-honored institution has come to an end. From all accounts there will be no more seeds and the only tears shed will fall on the floor of Congress itself. Those supposed to be benefited most the farmers, are said to have scorned the gift of a few seeds that might come up and might not, yet for years determined Congressmen fought for the privilege of thus "complimenting" their constituents and until now were able to win in the fight.

The idea was not without point at the outset, but the business seems to have been sadly mismanaged. Seeds suited to the climate and soil of Maine went to Texas, and vice versa. Either seeds of long past seasons were unloaded on the government's purchasers in too many instances, or the purchases were allowed to die of old age in the government's vaults before the scoffing clerks mailed them to the addresses handed in by the ever hopeful Congressmen. On the whole the undertaking was a failure and probably very few will now be sorry to see its end.

The State Department, in response to a request from Salvador, has issued an "interpretation" of the Monroe Doctrine. James Monroe, unlike certain of his successors, used the English language to express, and not conceal, though the doctrine he declared nearly a century ago requires no interpretation, because it says what it means and means what it says. It is notice to Europe to "keep off the grass" in this hemisphere.

EXCELLENT EFFECT IN NEW PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT FILM

Some idea of the attention paid to details by Cecil B. DeMille in his production of the Paramount-Artcraft picture, "Male and Female," which will be the attraction at the Coyle Theatre, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, March 15, 16 and 17, may be gained from a photographic feat which he accomplished during the filming. Those who are familiar with Sir James M. Barrie's famous play, "The Admirable Crichton," from which the new DeMille production was adapted, will recall that several of the most exciting scenes take place in a cave on a tropical island. In order to secure natural sunlight for "Shooting" these episodes, Mr. DeMille devised an intricate system of mammoth mirrors, by which rays of the sun were reflected far into the dark recesses of the cave. Despite the lavish scale upon which the picture was scheduled, the inimitable Barrie humor and his whimsical touches are apparent throughout. Thomas Meighan, the popular Pittsburgh boy, whose acting has brought him into a prominent place in filmdom, has the leading role, and other prominent players in the cast are Gloria Swanson, Lila Lee, Theodore Roberts, Ebe Daniels, Raymond Hatton and Guy Oliver.

DREAM REVEALED MYSTERIOUS MURDER

named Plymire, who occupied a comfortable farm and house. Rachel the daughter was engaged to young farmer of the neighborhood. On a Saturday evening in July, having finished her week's work, she dressed herself tidily and started to visit her married sister, who lived on a farm about five miles distant, intending to return on Monday morning. She tied up her Sunday gown and hat in a checkered handkerchief and carried her shoes and stockings in the other hand, meaning to walk in her bare feet, and put them on when she came in sight of her destination, after the canny Scotch fashion. She left home about seven o'clock in order to have the cool evening for her walk, the road to the farm was lonely and unfrequented. The girl did not return home on Monday, but no alarm was felt, as the family thought her sister would probably detain her for a few days; and it was not until the latter part of the week that it was found she had never been at her sister's. The country was seoured, but in vain; the alarm spread, and excited a degree of terror in the peaceable domestic community which would seem inexplicable to city people, to whom the newspapers have brought a budget of crime every morning since their childhood. To children raised in those lonely hamlets and hill-farms, a murder was a far-off, unreal horror, usually all that they knew of it was from the doings of Cain and Abel, set off with hideous wood-kuts in the family Bible.

The girl had left home on Saturday at seven o'clock. That night, long before ten o'clock (farmers go to bed with the chickens) a woman living in Greene county, about forty miles from the Plymire farm, awoke her husband in great terror, declaring that she had just seen a murder done, and went on to describe a place she had never seen before—a hill country with a wagon-road running through it, and a girl with a bundle tied in a checkered handkerchief, her shoes and white stockings in the other hand, walking briskly down

A Warning To the Public

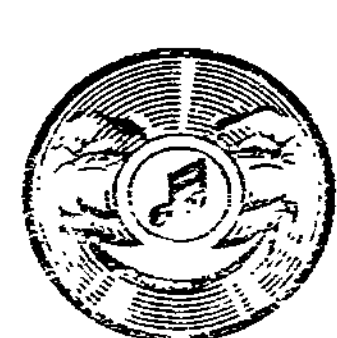

You are insured against loss from fire. You ought to read it through again at this time to see if it contains a Co-Insurance Clause. You need hardly be reminded that the replacement cost of all buildings and commodities has advanced to such an extent that unless you have proportionately increased the total amount of insurance carried on the property covered by this policy, you are today greatly under insured. If this is the case and your policy contains a Co-Insurance Clause, you would be a loser in the event of fire no matter whether the damage be heavy or slight.

Even if your policy does not contain a Co-Insurance Clause, your good judgment will tell you that you do not want your property under insured.

Do not neglect this notice and reminder of a situation fraught with danger to you. Ask this office at once what you ought to do about it. We are at your service and shall be glad of the opportunity to advise you.

ASSERT POWER OVER DEATH

Two East Indians Make Extraordinary Claims, Naturally Some-what Hard to Prove.

The dead can be brought to life. This remarkable claim has just been made by a woman doctor of Rangoon (Burma).

She claims to have prepared certain remedies, which are to be taken internally and applied externally for a week, at the end of which any dead person will revive. As may be expected, she keeps her remedies a secret and she will not disclose their ingredients to anybody, writes S. B. Banerjee of Calcutta.

She further claims that the dead person, when revived, will have a new mind and better features. The treatment is to be completely successful must be continued for a month or two.

The Burmese doctor has created a sensation in the country. Some are scoffing at her, while others are urging the authorities to test her claims.

In this connection, I may state that some time ago a Hindu doctor made a similar claim and requested me to secure a dead body for him. Now, no Hindu or Mussulman will allow any experiment to be made on the dead body of a near and dear relative.

Their religion forbids such experimenting. Soon after the doctor had asked my help, a distinguished Hindu knight, whom I knew, died. I was urged to sound his relatives. I did sound them, but my request was rejected. I approached certain doctors, but they all laughed at me and refused to help me.

The Hindu doctor, I regret to say, will not disclose his mode of treatment. He will not charge anything. He wants to be judged by his results. But who will care to help him?

NOT ALWAYS PACIFIC PEOPLE

Chinese Have Had Great Military Past, But Have Not Fostered the Fighting Spirit.

Writing of the romance of military insignia, Col. Robert E. Wylie doubtless surprised some of his readers in the National Geographic Magazine when he informed them that the first military medal was probably awarded by a Chinese emperor, some 1,900 years ago.

The statement falls pat with an article by Mr. T. L. Leo, a Chinese student of the history of his own country, published in Asia magazine, in which Mr. Leo looks back to Chinese military practice, in the early centuries of the Christian era, and shows how the treatise on the "Art of War," written by the ancient Chinese military leader, Sun Wu, corresponded to the maxims of Frederick the Great, which were in turn expressed by von Hindenburg.

The military past of China is nowadays very generally overlooked, and the explanation advanced by Mr. Leo is interesting at this period. The Chinese, he says, have never admired the fighting spirit, but "on the contrary, have ever been condemning it, curbing it, and forcing it to lie dormant."

Sound and Light as Power.

Starting, steering and stopping a model auto by blowing an ordinary police whistle, an English scientist recently gave a striking demonstration of the possibilities of distant control of machinery.

The performance is the subject of an illustrated article in the Popular Mechanics Magazine. The little electrically driven car, with its manikin passengers, started forward at the first blast of sound. Another note from the whistle turned it around and a third stopped it at its starting place.

By blowing whistles of varying tones, a series of small electric lamps were selectively lighted. Control by light rays was illustrated by the ringing of a gong connected to light sensitive cells, when the illuminator of a hand lamp was thrown upon them, thereby reducing their electrical resistance.

J. P. Paid No Attention.

Jack Rowan is "some" boy. The neighbors all admit that. His original sayings and slang, repeated after hearing it from incautious neighbors, are well known in his part of Thirty-seventh street.

"Jack," said his mother one day, "go across the street and get J. P."—J. P. being his baby brother. Jack has reached the mature age of three and three-quarters, while J. P. has just got around the corner of two.

Presently Jack came back without J. P., and to his mother's questions as to why he did not bring his brother, said: "I talked with my mouth, and J. P. wouldn't pay any attention to me."—Indianapolis News.

New Use for Old Tires.

A Hutchinson motor tire dealer has half-soled his shoes with strips from a highly guaranteed tire in which he deals, figuring that if the tires are guaranteed good for 8,000 miles under a car weighing a ton the mileage under his own 140 pounds ought to be practically unlimited.—Kansas City Star.

HOW SNOW NOURISHES SOIL

Valuable Manure Because of Its Carbonic Acid, So Necessary for Revitalizing the Earth.

In a handful of snow there might be 20,000 crystals, and 20,000 of them would be alike.

Sleet is snow which in its passage to the earth, has passed through a layer of warmer air, and become partially melted.

Snow is early or late, according to whether the summer was short and soon over or extended to the autumn. A short, early summer means that the earth cools more quickly.

Ground which is covered with snow very rarely falls below freezing point, although the air may be fifteen to twenty degrees colder. This is because snow is a very bad conductor of heat—it holds the heat in the ground and stops its radiation.

The reference in the Psalms: "He clotheth snow like wool," is not to the fact that snow and wool are alike in appearance, but to the warmth of each.

Snow is warm because air is held in its minute crystal interstices. No heat can escape from anything covered with snow. Snow is, literally, a valuable manure, and nourishes the earth with its carbonic acid, which penetrates slowly into the soil and is thus fully absorbed.

Finally, snow is ruinous to shoe leather, because it warms the leather, opens it, and then penetrates.

DUMB CURED BY SUGGESTION

English Specialist in Nervous Diseases Claims to Have Achieved Some Remarkable Results.

Can a dumb man be made to speak merely by being told that he must speak? Impossible though it may seem, cures have been effected by this means.

Lieut.-Colonel Sir Frederick Mott, one of the foremost specialists in nervous diseases, claims to have cured several dumb soldiers by suggestion.

Five men who were mutes were sent to him after they had been treated previously, and it had been suggested to them that they were not going to get well. He took the first man into a room and told him that he never left a patient until he had cured him, "even if it took him a couple of hours."

The doctor had recourse to a little galvanism on the man's throat, and asked him to count ten. At first he indicated that he could not, but after coughing his lips began to move. Then he was asked to name the days of the week and sing "God Save the King." Eventually he spoke, and the other four were also cured by this method. —London Tri-Bits.

Pneumatic Chisel.

Lord Taft, a Chicago sculptor, is stated, has installed in his studio a pneumatic chisel, by means of which the work of outlining marble statues is greatly simplified. The old method of carving with mallet and chisel is not only laborious, but rather awkward for the sculptor, since only one hand is left free to guide the chisel.

In the case of the pneumatic chisel both hands may be used for this purpose. The pneumatic chisel is driven by compressed air, at a pressure of 77 pounds per square inch, operating through a flexible tube, the air being compressed in a large tank by means of an electric motor. The air passing through the tube has the effect of driving the chisel back and forth against the stone, just as if it were hit by a mallet. The chisel, of course, is used only to outline the statue roughly, the finishing work all being done by hand.

Twenty States Mined Gold. Twenty states and the territory of Alaska produced gold in 1919, as shown by the geological survey. The big productions came from the Rocky mountain states and the Pacific coast, but a little gold was mined in New England, a little in the South and a little in the Mississippi valley. Maine, Missouri and South Carolina go in the record by yielding five ounces each. Vermont found ten ounces. Georgia and North Carolina forty-eight ounces. Texas fifty-three ounces and Wyoming fifteen. California led with an output of $40,738 ounces. Colorado came second with $70,990 and Alaska was a close third with $37,131. South Dakota came fourth with $24,820.

It is hard to personate and act a part long; for where truth is not at the bottom, nature will always be endeavoring to return, and will peep out and betray herself one time or another. Therefore if any man think it convenient to seem good, let him be so indeed, and then his goodness will appear to everybody's satisfaction; for truth is convincing and carries its own light and evidence with it, and will not only commend us to every man's conscience, but, which is much more, to God, who searcheth and seeth our hearts; so, that, upon all accounts, sincerity is the true wisdom.—Tillotson.

Economical.

THE POLLYANNAS ARE ENTERTAINED BY MISS HEUPEL

Miss Amelia Heupel very pleasantly entertained the Pollyannas of the Christ Lutheran church at her home last evening. After the business hour the time was spent in sewing and music. Members of the society were surprised by a visit from their pastor, Rev. W. C. Bressler, who made a short talk, which was enjoyed by all. Luncheon was served by the hostess.

It jars one's literary sense to hear demand for the "true facts," but no doubt the employment of facts that are not facts is a growing vice.

More Reductions

It is apparently a buyer's market, prices are receding from their high level, the declines few at first, are extending to a larger number of articles. Some of the necessities of life are still going higher, but they are the exceptions, careful marketing will enable you to save and buy on an economical basis. We recommend buying for your immediate need only, and from day to day as you need the goods.

We know of no better places than our stores to do your shopping, the difference in prices, at which we sell our merchandise compared with those of other retailers mounts up over a given period.

Corn Pain Stopped Quick

The corn pains cease as soon as a few drops of "Gets-It" reach the corn. It goes out of the hurting business forever.

The price of cotton fabrics and the price of Wirthmor Cotton Blouses

—Raw and finished cotton costs approximately four times what they did in pre-war days.
—Wirthmor costs but little more.
—This is due to large production—great economies in making—and an unwavering desire to keep prices as low as possible on the part of Wirthmor Makers and Wirthmor Store —On March 1st, an increase made imperative by mounting fabric costs—became effective in the price of these favored waists.
—Thereafter as always in the past—the Wirthmor will represent the maximum of Blouse value at the price.

A new allotment of the styles illustrated has just arrived. These are still priced at $1.50

SHALE ACCEPTABLE AS FUEL

Satisfactorily Used Now in Estonia, It May Be Taken Up by Other Countries.

Railroads in Estonia seem in a fair way to discard coal in favor of bituminous shale, a substance common enough in geological formations to make the Estonian experiment widely interesting. Lacking coal, the Estonian provisional government has been investigating the possibilities of shale, and, as the report comes by way of Helsingfors, shale is now being used for a good many purposes. The gas factory at Reval, for example, is using shale exclusively for making gas. But so far, shale has not been adopted in the fire-bricks. The factory probably wants to see how completely shale can be used to run railway trains, and the railway factory in Reval is now experimenting with fire-bricks suitable to using shale in a locomotive. That it can be successfully used, however, seems to have been proved. Cost is a strong argument for the use of shale, and 3 marks for a pound, or some 30 or 40 pounds, of shale, as against 20 marks for the same measure of coal makes it very much cheaper. It would be odd, but not impossible, if later events should show that in using shale for fuel the little-known country of Estonia is leading the world.

CARRY OWN WOOD TO SCHOOL

French Children Study Their Lessons in Cold Buildings With Shell-Torn Holes.

Children of Laon, in the devastated Alsace district, have to take their own wood to school. Instead of swinging along merrily, as American children do, with their books under their arms, each tiny little youngster staggers along under an armful of wood, shell-shattered tree trunks or bits of timber from trench and dugout. It is the only method of keeping warm in the desolate schoolrooms.

Under the conditions prevailing in schools in northern France, Lincoln's persevering studies by the light of a big log fire cease to be remarkable. The back room of a cafe, the cold interior of a village church with the wind whistling through apertures in the walls made by shells, or perhaps the one remaining room of the former schoolhouse are the places where the French children are studying without books, paper or pencils through the long, cold, dark winters of northern France.

For blackboards the bare walls are used. Charcoal or bits of chalk from the white cliffs of the country must serve as pencils. A few of the more fortunate children have bits of slate from some shattered roof upon which they painfully execute their lessons.—Stars and Stripes.

Tin as a Common Bond.

It is not surprising that the United States, where almost every variety of eatable has found its way into tin cans for preservation, should use nearly two-thirds of the total production of tin in the world. But it may be an unexpected discovery to find that the South American country, Bolivia, supplies about one-quarter of the total output. In consequence, Bolivia, a producer, wants to make friends with the tin-using republic to the north, and more so now that the United States has its own smelters to refine the ore, an innovation due to the war. The South American nation hopes to secure a loan for completing the Pan-American railway in order to improve commercial facilities. As long as the canning of fruits and vegetables continues to flourish as it has in the past, in the United States, doubt vanishes as to the close friendship between the second producer and the first consumer of the world's tin.

Oak-Shoot Germany.

The latest German postage stamp shows four young oak-shoots springing from the stump of a dead-and-gone tree, to signify the resurrection of the new Germany from the old. The designer of the stamp evidently overlooked the fact that while shoots may spring from an old stump and flourish in a small way, yet the stump itself never grows into a great tree again.

The oak-shoots fill an oval frame or scroll, on which appears the words "Deutsche Nationalversammlung" (German federation). The part within the oval is blue; without, the corners showing the figures of value, are brown.

There are 12 steps around the face of the watch, 1, 2, 3, etc. The hour hand makes the circuit once while the minute hand makes it 12 times. It is true that the minute hand makes 11 more steps on the dial than the hour hand does, but it also makes the same step that the hour hand takes, thus making 12 to the hour hand's one.

Not Reducing.

Mrs. Bascom was buying some lard at the meat counter. Her little boy was outside waiting for her. A neighbor lady came by and asked the boy: "Where's your maw?" "She's in the store gettin' fat."—Philadelphia Ledger.

the grassy side of the road. She was met by a young man—the woman judged from their manner the meeting was by appointment; they sat down on a log and talked for some time. The man at last rose, stepped behind her, and drawing out a hatchet, struck her twice on the head. She fell backward on the wet, rotten leaves dead. Presently, the man was joined by another, also the young, who asked, "Is it done?" He nodded, and together they lifted the body and carried it away out of sight. After a while they came back, found the bundle of Sunday finery and the shoes and stockings all of which were stained with blood. There was a ruined old mill near the road; they went into it, lifted a loose board in the flooring, put the bundle, shoes, etc., with the hatchet underneath, and replaced the board. Then they separated and went through the woods in different directions. The farmer's wife told her dream to her husband that night; the next day (Sunday) going to a little country church, she remained during the intermission between the morning and afternoon services. The neighbors who had come from a circuit of twenty miles to church, gathered, according to their homely habit, in the churchyard to eat their lunch and exchange the news. Our dreamer told her story again and again, for she was impressed by it as if it had been reality. After the afternoon service the congregation separated, going to their widely scattered homes. There were thus many witnesses ready to certify to the fact that the woman had told the dream the morning after the murder was committed at a distance of forty miles, when it was absolutely impossible that the news should have reached her. There were no telegraphs, we must remember, and no railways, in those days—not even mail-carriers in those secluded spots.

When the story of the girl's disappearance was told over the country at the end of the next week, the people to whom the dream had been repeated recalled it. Now-a-days the matter would only serve as good material for the reporters, but the men of those days still believed that God took an oversight even of their dreams. Might this not be a hint from Him? The Rev. Charles Wheeler, Baptist clergyman of Washington, well known in Western Pennsylvania and Virginia a generation ago, and Ephraim Blaine, Esq., a magistrate, father of the present Senator from Maine, and as popular a man in his narrower circle, drove over to see the woman who had told the dream. Without stating their purpose they took her and her husband, on pretense of business, to the Plymire farm. It was the first time in her life that she had left her own county, and she was greatly interested and amused. They drove over the whole of the road down which Rachel Plymire had gone.

"Have you ever seen this neighborhood?" one of them asked.

"Never," she replied.

That ended the matter, and they turned back, taking a little-used cross-road to save time. Presently the woman started up in great agitation, crying, "This is the place I dreamed of!" They assured her that Rachel Plymire had not been upon that road at all. "I know nothing about her," she said, "but the girl I saw in my dream came along here; there is the path through which the man came, and beyond that turning you will find the log on which he killed her." They did find the log, and on the ground the stains of blood. The woman, walking swiftly, led them to the old mill and to the board under which lay the stained clothes and the hatchet. The girl's body was found afterward, buried by a creek near at hand. Rachel's lover had already been arrested on suspicion. It was hinted that he had grown tired of the girl and for many reasons found her hard to shake off. The woman recognized him in a crowd of other men and startled her companions still more by pointing out another young fellow from the West as his companion in her dream. The young man was tried in the town of Washington for murder. The dreamer was brought into court, and an effort was actually made to put her on the witness stand; but even then men could not be hung on the evidence of a dream. Without it there was not enough proof for conviction and the jury, unwillingly enough, we may be sure, allowed the prisoner to escape. It was held as positive proof of his guilt that he immediately married the sister of the other accused man and removed to Ohio, then the wilderness of the West. R. H. D.

FAILED TO AGREE IN DAMAGE CASES

Unable to agree, after being out the entire night, the jury in the suits of Joe Obradovich against John Dugan, and Dugan against Obradovich, was discharged on Wednesday by Judge Brownson from further consideration of the case. The jury had sent communication to the court that it had failed to agree. It was brought in and each questioned as to whether or not he felt they could act together. It was the opinion of all that they were hopelessly apart. The suits grew out of an automobile collision on the Bentleyville-Charleroi road.

STORY-BOOK CHARACTERS WELL PORTRAYED BY LOCAL PERFORMERS

Realistic Presentation Of WILL SPEAK AT THE Mother Goose Characters ROUND TABLE MEETING
In Musical Fantasy

TO BE REPEATED THIS EVENING

The high school auditorium was more than packed to its capacity Thursday evening to witness the portrayal of famous characters of Mother Goose nursery rhymes who had seemingly stepped from the pages of this well known and popular book of childhood's days. Students from the high school, as well as pupils from the grades, with the addition of many others well known in social and musical circles, took part in the production of "The Wishing Ring," which is pronounced by all those who had the pleasure of witnessing the performance last evening, as one of the best ever given in Charleroi.

The play is a spectacular musical fantasy, and tells the story of Jean and Allan, mortals, represented by Virginia Nutt and Charles Lee, who wish that the characters of the Mother Goose tales might become real, after which follows the unfolding of the plot.

Dissatisfied because they were not permitted to do as they desired, they expressed a wish to go to story-book land. They went. Finding that some one had stolen the wishing ring they discovered discord and trouble and were finally happy to return home. The second scene was the road to story-book land, the third the garden of Misses Mary Quite Contrary, the fourth the court of the King of Hearts, and the last their play room.

The various characters were portrayed in a most excellent manner and in a way to call forth the highest commendation of the audience. The play was directed by Miss Carr and the various choruses showed painstaking work, not only on the part of the director, but the players as well. The proceeds of the play are for the Near East Relief, and this performance will be given again this evening.

The cast of characters is as follows: Mother—Jean and Allan, who wish that the characters of the Mother Goose tales might become real.

February Coal Shipments Exceeds Those Of January

The February shipments of coal via rail boats and barges 1707, thru through Lock No. 4 for February exceed those of January by 31,890,000 bushels of coal. The increase in shipments over January was 13,420,000 bushels of coal and over February of one year ago of 11,619,000 bushels. These figures indicate greater activity on the part of the mines in the upper pools of the valley, which, if maintained, will make March a record month.

The report as made by Superintendent Sweeney to the government, officials is as follows: Going up—Lockings 541, steamers 343, boats 1,753, other craft 23, other products, 35 tons, gravel 3,000 bushels, 75 yards of cut stone, 20,000 feet of lumber and 450 tons of merchandise.

Going down—Lockings 543, steam-

WILL FIX DATE FOR ATHLETIC MEET

Notices are now being mailed to the members of the executive committee calling them into session on Saturday, March 20, for the purpose of determining the date on which the annual field meet of the Washington County Interscholastic Athletic Association shall be held. While this will be definitely determined by the members of the committee, it is probable that the meet between the athletes of the high schools of the county will be held some time in May.

Washington High carried off the honors in 1919, but there is no certainty they will be able to duplicate their performance this year. Teams from Donora, Charleroi, Monongahela and Canonsburg will have splendid representation and should make a good showing. Prof. Lively of the high school is a member of the executive committee.

FORMER CHARLEROI GIRL MARRIED IN YOUNGSTOWN

On March 1st, at 4 o'clock p. m., a quiet but beautifully appointed wedding was solemnized at St. John's Episcopal church, Youngstown, Ohio, when Miss Lillian Watkinson, formerly of Charleroi, became the bride of Frederick Joseph Nardine, of Philadelphia. The Rev. Leonard Spry read the nuptial service. The bride was charmingly attired in a smart blue tailored suit and wore a corsage of bride's roses. After March 13 the young couple will be at home to their friends at 1247 Foster Street, Philadelphia.

TWO SMALL BOYS ROB MAIL SACK

Financial affluence on the part of two small boys, who were freely spending money Thursday afternoon along Crest avenue, led to their being haled before Burgess Woodward last evening on a charge of robbing a carrier's mail bag.

The robbery occurred at the George Nucci meat market, corner of Ninth and Crest. The carrier, Theodore McMahon, had left a bag of mail in the store while he was making deliveries in that neighborhood, and it was while he was on this duty that the boys robbed the sack. There were three in the party, all of them pupils at the Crest avenue school but only two of them, John Koss and Wasy Husovitz, were concerned in the robbery.

The men employed in the meat market were in the basement at the time, when the boys seeing their opportunity ran in and grabbed a handful of letters out of the bag. As near as can be learned, about ten letters were taken, none of which were registered.

In one, however, a $10.00 bill was found, which the boys proceeded to spend and this lavish expenditure on their part led to their detection. When the carrier returned, he noticed at once that the letters were missing and a search was begun at once. The letters were found, but the envelope had been torn. A further investigation ascertained who the boys were and they were taken before the Burgess.

CHARLEROI HIGH TO MEET ROCHESTER

Tomorrow evening at the High School gym the C. H. S. basketball team will clash with Rochester's representative in the last game of the season, and the game will surely be a "gummer." The local boys are in fine trim and are confident of hanging a crepe on Rochester's door. The game is prepared to hard, a record crowd and it would behoove the fans to come early. The game will start promptly at 8 o'clock.

Morton Farm Near Bealls- ville To Be Taken Over

April 1

TO ADOPT CLUB NAME LATER

A largely attended meeting by members of the new inter-county golf club was held at Washington Thursday night, at which time steps were taken for the organization of the club and the taking over of the Morton farm, the proposed site for the club house and golf links on the National Pike, east of Beallsville. Washington, Fayette and Westmoreland counties were all represented at the meeting.

Fifteen men were elected for the purpose of incorporation and the management of the affairs of the club until a charter, which will be applied for at once, is obtained and organization perfected thereunder.

In order to take over the Morton farm it was necessary to organize a corporation, which is to be shown as the National Highway Land Development company. This company is capitalized at $20,000, divided into 600 shares with a par value of $50 per share. This stock has all been subscribed for by prominent citizens of the three counties.

Seven directors, who will have charge of the land development company, were elected last night, among them being Kerfoot W. Daly of Charleroi. Of the fifteen men elected to manage the affairs of the golf club, R. H. Rush of Charleroi, was selected as one of the directors.

The name of the new club is left to the board of 15 managers, and will be glad to receive suggestions from members of the organizations and others.

The Morton farm will be taken over the first of April and the board is empowered to employ golf architects to lay out the course and plan the club house. It is the aim of those interested to make the club one of the most modern in this section of the state.
